Congregational Eco Audit

Colorado Interfaith Power & Light provides support to individuals and congregations in their goal to be faithful stewards of God's creation. We encourage stewardship through the promotion of energy conservation, energy efficiency, renewable energy and making the commitment to sustainability. We seek to protect the earth's ecosystems, safeguard public health and ensure sufficient sustainable energy for all.

An excellent educational program to help people both learn more about sustainability and understand how they can apply it in their own lives is through doing an Eco Audit™ for the congregation's facility. An Eco Audit is a high level energy and lifestyle CO<sub>2</sub> analysis program that helps individuals and organizations understand how they are using energy, where they are spending money, their carbon footprint totals, and their best ways to reduce it.

The program starts with collecting 12 months of utility data, vehicles and miles driven, and waste totals. A sustainability survey is included to rate where the congregation is in other areas such as recycling, purchasing, and other sustainable practices. We then provide feedback and recommendations for saving money and becoming more sustainable. The audit report will provide the following information:

- Graphs showing your energy usage mix and costs
- Carbon Footprint
- Seasonal energy use graphs
- Potential savings forecasts
- Recommendations
